Writing

Personal essay

Discuss an accomplishment, event, or realization that sparked a period of personal growth and a new understanding of yourself or others.

We live in a constantly changing and developing world. As new concepts and thoughts enter our lives every day, all we can do is sit down and try to understand these concepts. Maybe that's a part of growing up. In the last few years of my life, I have felt myself growing more than ever. This sudden growth phase was a little scary for me. There was a dark side of the world that my parents kept me away from during my childhood. And it wasn't easy for me to suddenly step out of my comfort zone and meet the realities of this World. I was a pretty normal kid. My father was a soldier in the Turkish armed forces and was a role model for me. I was only 11 years old when my father and his friends were dismissed from their duty and imprisoned after getting a dirty slander. We had to leave the city where we lived with my mother and siblings and start our lives over again in another city. This series of events should have been the turning point of my life. But I was still too young to understand what was happening. It took a while to get used to this new city we moved to, but over time I adopted my new life. Only then did I understand what had happened in the past. When I started high school, I started to learn from my mistakes. In my adolescence, I realized that I needed to live my life more determinedly and consciously. I wanted to be able to perceive the things around me and evaluate new opportunities. Because everything we have can suddenly slip from our hands in one night (just like what happened to my father years ago). All of that made me understand the importance of every step I took and every experience I gained. First year of high school, I decided not to waste my high school period and to make the most of every moment. I first participated in the international student exchange program organized at my school and met foreign students there. This was the first social event I attended in high school and it was a very exciting experience. I wanted to continue this and started participating in/organizing different events at my school. I organized and took part in many events with my friends, such as a youth festival, a teacher's day theater play, a karaoke competition, and a football tournament. But these were not enough for me, I had to do more, and I was confident in myself. I wanted to meet people from a wider audience and get new experiences, and as a first step, I created a LinkedIn account for myself. I met new people through LinkedIn during and after the COVID-19 quarantine period. Over time, these people became my friends and work partners. We established startups together, attended online courses, and hosted webinars. While I accumulated many good memories, I also learned new things and gained experiences. Now, when I look back, I can say that I have become a young man that my father would be proud of and that is very important for me. Most of what I have done so far was to make my father, who is an idol for me, proud. This has always been a source of motivation for me. Now I want to go on a new journey and explore new horizons. This is one of the reasons why I want to study at a university in the USA. I'm no longer afraid of starting over and stepping outside my comfort zone like I was when I was a kid. Because during these 6 years, I learned that no matter how difficult the conditions are, a solution can be found. And no matter what, I want to continue improving myself...
